Robert Turnbull from The Backyard Bard performs Luke's Gospel word-for-word in an epic feat of memory. In the tradition of Alec McCowen's 1978 Tony nominated performance of Mark's Gospel, 'Jesus: According to Luke' reveals the drama residing in this ancient biblical text. Using merely a chair and two milk crates, Robert recreates each scene and character using the powerful craft of storytelling.

Melbourne theatre company The Backyard Bard has produced Shakespearean and Biblical Storytelling productions since 2003. Robert has played lead roles in Daniel (2005), Elijah (2007) and Elisha (2008). He also directed Esther in the 2006 Melbourne Fringe Festival. He is performing both Jesus: According to Luke and The Book of Revelation in the 2009 Melbourne Fringe Festival. This means he will have performed almost 25% of the New Testament and 9% of the entire Bible. MORE BIO HERE

The Gospel of Luke was written in the second half of the first century by a doctor who used eye-witness sources to compile his chronicle of Jesus' life. His account presents a radical Jesus, despised for his scandalous social behaviour and celebrated by outsiders and the destitute.

Told with humour, passion and even Scottish angels, Jesus: According to Luke will appeal to both the Homer Simpsons and the Ned Flanders among us.
